Introduction

On 28th November 2025, the Institution's Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC), in collaboration with the Institution's Innovation Council (IIC), the session on "Achieving Problem–Solution Fit" was conducted as a part of the institution's continual improvement and innovation-oriented activities to enhance students' analytical, entrepreneurial, and problem-solving competencies.

The program formed part of IQAC and IIC's initiatives to empower students with exposure to real-world entrepreneurial experiences, success stories, and practical strategies essential for personal and professional growth.

Objective of the Seminar

The primary objectives of the motivational session were:

- To help students understand the concept of Problem–Solution Fit, the foundational step in innovation.
- To enable participants to identify real-world problems through structured methods.
- To train students in validating ideas before prototype development.
- To guide aspiring innovators in creating feasible, user-centric solutions.
- To prepare teams for IIC and SSIP innovation competitions and incubation processes.

Session Highlights

The event began with a welcome address by the IIC convener, followed by an introduction of the guest speaker. The seminar saw enthusiastic participation from students and faculty across different departments.
